NY AG Letitia James says Purdue Pharma and other manufacturers downplayed the dangers of OxyContin, a highly addictive pain reliever. 2

NY accuses opioid maker Purdue of illegal fund transfers to Sacklers

N.Y. prosecutors filed a lawsuit against Purdue Pharma and the family that owns the OxyContin maker.

Purdue Pharma LP fraudulently transferred funds to members of the wealthy Sackler family who control the OxyContin maker despite knowing it faced major liabilities that had made it already insolvent, New York's attorney general alleged on Thursday.

New York Attorney General Letitia James made the claims in a revised lawsuit already pending against Purdue over its role in the opioid epidemic that added members of the Sackler family and other drug manufacturers and distributors as defendants.

The lawsuit alleged Purdue and other manufacturers engaged in deceptive marketing that downplayed the dangers of the addictive painkillers and accused distributors of failing to detect the diversion of the drugs for illicit purposes.

"As the Sackler family and the other defendants grew richer, New Yorkers' health grew poorer and our state was left to foot the bill," James said in a statement.

The revised lawsuit also added as defendants units of opioid manufacturers Johnson & Johnson, Endo International Plc, Teva Pharmaceutical Industries Ltd. and distributors McKesson Corp., Cardinal Health Inc. and AmerisourceBergen Corp.

In a statement, the Sackler family called the lawsuit "a misguided attempt to place blame where it does not belong for a complex public health crisis."

Representatives for the other defendants did not respond to requests for comment.

The case is among roughly 2,000 lawsuits filed by state and local governments seeking to hold Purdue and other pharmaceutical companies responsible for the U.S. opioid crisis.

Opioids were involved in a record 47,600 overdose deaths in 2017 in the United States, according to the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

The complaint came after Purdue and the Sacklers on Tuesday reached a $270 million settlement with the state of Oklahoma resolving similar allegations. Purdue had been exploring filing for bankruptcy prior the accord's announcement.

In her lawsuit, James accused Purdue of seeking to "intimidate" states pursuing lawsuits against it by threatening bankruptcy, which would hinder their cases and limit their ability to recover damages.

Yet James said Purdue, which is fighting lawsuits by 34 other states and hundreds of localities, has continued in the face of its liabilities to pay millions of dollars to the Sacklers.

The lawsuit argued Purdue was either insolvent or near insolvency when it transferred those funds, making the transfers illegal under New York law.

The payments meant Purdue, which had average annual sales of $3 billion, no longer had assets that could satisfy the state's claims, the lawsuit said. REUTERS

Former Yale coach pleads guilty in admissions scandal

2 The former head coach of women's soccer at Yale University admitted on Thursday that he accepted bribes to help parents get their children into the Ivy League school, becoming the third person to plead guilty in the U.S. college admissions scandal. Rudolph "Rudy" Meredith, whose decision to cooperate helped investigators discover the mastermind of the wide-ranging scheme, pleaded guilty in federal court in Boston to conspiracy and wire fraud charges. He is among 50 people, including the actresses Lori Loughlin and Felicity Huffman, charged with participating in the scheme, headed by college-admissions counseling service operator Rick Singer. Prosecutors said the consultant charged wealthy parents hefty sums and then used bribes and cheating to illegally secure admission for their children to universities including Yale, USC and Georgetown.

Kushner meets Senate intelligence panel again: Sources

3 President Donald Trump's son-in-law and adviser Jared Kushner on Thursday appeared at a closed-door meeting of the U.S. Senate Intelligence Committee for the second time, four congressional sources said. It was not known what topics were discussed with Kushner, who is involved in developing an Israeli-Palestinian peace plan and has helped forged closer U.S. ties with Saudi Arabia. The committee has been conducting a largely bipartisan investigation of suspected Russian interference in the 2016 U.S. election and the nature of contacts between Trump campaign members and Russian officials, including Kushner. A spokesman for Kushner's lawyer Abbe Lowell did not immediately respond to a request for comment.

Plastic bags to be banned in New York state

4 Proposed by Gov. Andrew Cuomo, New York is one step closer to a statewide ban on most types of single-use plastic bags and the second state ban after California. While the details are still being worked out in Albany, the current plan is to ban plastic bags for retail use, and charge 5 cents for paper. The measure is expected to be combined into the state budget, which lawmakers aim to pass on April 1. If the measure passes, it would begin in March 2020 but allow plastic to be used in restaurants and for wrapping deli or meat-counter products, according to the New York Times.

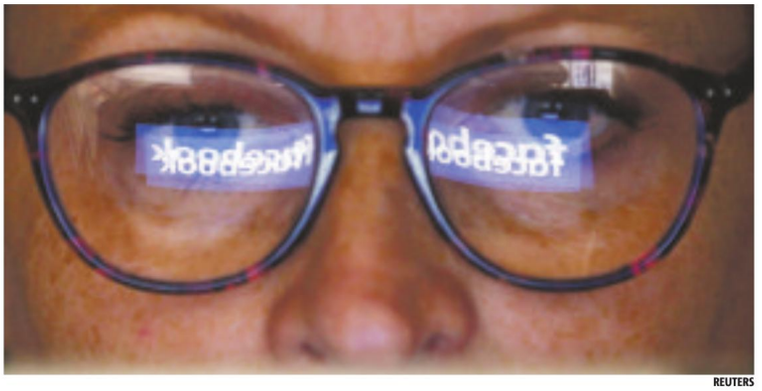
Facebook charged with racial discrimination in targeted housing ads

The U.S. HUD charged Facebook with violating the Fair Housing Act on the basis of race and color.



REUTERS

The Trump administration on Thursday accused Facebook Inc. of selling targeted advertising that discriminated on the basis of race in violation of the U.S. Fair Housing Act.

Seeking damages and unspecified relief for harm caused, the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development said in its civil charge that Facebook also restricted who could see housing-related ads based on national origin, religion, familial status, sex and disability.

Facebook said it had been working with HUD to address the concerns and was surprised by the department's decision to issue the charge, having taken "significant steps" to prevent ads that discriminate across its platforms.

The company also said HUD had "insisted on access to sensitive information — like user data — without adequate safeguards." HUD claims Facebook mines data about its users and then uses machine learning to predict their responses to ads in ways that may recreate groupings defined by protected class.

The social media giant last week agreed to overhaul its paid advertising platform as part of a wide-ranging settlement with U.S. civil rights groups, which had filed five separate lawsuits accusing the company of enabling discrimination in advertising.

Under U.S. law, including the federal Fair Housing Act, it is illegal to publish certain types of ads — including online ads — if they indicate a preference based on race, religion, sex or other specified classifications.

As part of last week's settlement, Facebook said it would create a new advertising portal for ads linked to housing and employment that would limit targeting options for advertisers. It also pledged to build a tool that would allow users to search all current housing ads listed in the United States, regardless of whether the ads were directed at them.

The HUD charge said Facebook enabled advertisers to exclude people whom the social network's data classified as parents, non-American-born, non-Christian, or a variety of other interests that closely align with the Fair Housing Act's protected classes.

"Facebook is discriminating against people based upon who they are and where they live," HUD Secretary Ben Carson said. "Using a computer to limit a person's housing choices can be just as discriminatory as slamming a door in someone's face."

CNBC later reported that HUD was also looking into similar ad targeting practices at Twitter and Google, Facebook's main competition for online advertising dollars.

HUD could not immediately be reached for comment.

Both companies vehemently denied allowing discriminatory advertising, but acknowledged that they allow advertisers to target by gender.

Researchers have told Reuters that gender targeting could potentially be a violation of the Fair Housing Act.

Discrimination against transgender individuals was prohibited, Google said.

"We've had policies in place for many years that prohibit targeting ads on the basis of sensitive categories," Google said in a statement. REUTERS

Actor Jussie Smollett. REUTERS

Trump calls Smollett case 'embarrassment,' announces review

Chicago prosecutors dropped charges against the "Empire" actor, resulting in outrage by the mayor and police.

U.S. President Donald Trump said that the Department of Justice will "review" the case of actor Jussie Smollett, who was charged with staging a fake hate crime in Chicago before prosecutors abruptly dropped the case this week.

Trump wrote in an early-morning Twitter message announcing the review that the case had embarrassed the nation.

Smollett, who is black and gay, said two men attacked him on the street at night in January, making homophobic and racist remarks, pouring a chemical on him and putting a noose around his neck while shouting support for Trump.

Investigators later charged Smollett with paying $3,500 to the two men to pretend to attack him in order to garner public sympathy for himself. Prosecutors dropped the charges on Tuesday, saying they stood by the accusation but that an agreement by Smollett to forfeit his $10,000 bond was a just outcome.

Smollett, 36, says he is innocent and did not stage the attack.

Tina Glandian, one of his defense lawyers, told NBC News on Thursday that she was not concerned by the review. "To my knowledge, nothing improper was done," she said in the interview.

She acknowledged that Smollett was friendly with the men he accused of attacking him, brothers Abimbola and Olabinjo Osundairo, and that he had spoken on the phone to one of them, who had been working as his fitness trainer, about an hour before the incident.

"He had a hard time believing his friend would be behind this," she said. Asked about Smollett telling police his attackers appeared to be white, Glandian speculated that the brothers, who are black, may have worn whiteface makeup.

The brothers have not spoken about the case since police said they confessed to being paid to stage the attack.

The county prosecutors' decision stunned the city's police chief, prompted the police union to demand a federal investigation, and enraged Chicago Mayor Rahm Emanuel, a Democrat, who called it a "whitewash" that made a fool of the city.

Trump, a Republican, echoed those remarks on Thursday.

"FBI & DOJ to review the outrageous Jussie Smollett case in Chicago," Trump wrote on Twitter, referring to the Federal Bureau of Investigation and Department of Justice. "It is an embarrassment to our Nation!"

The Department of Justice declined to comment or answer questions about the review.

The FBI has already had some involvement in the case, with agents investigating a threatening letter Smollett said he received prior to the attack, according to the Chicago Police Department.

The initial reports of two Trump supporters attacking a gay, black celebrity drew widespread sympathy for Smollett, particularly from Democrats. That faded quickly after the actor's arrest, and the case was seized on by some as an example of what Trump likes to deride as "fake news."

On Thursday, Mayor Emanuel said he would seek to have Smollett reimburse Chicago for the investigation costs, and rejected Trump's federal review, telling the president to "sit this one out."

Chicago's chief prosecutor, Cook County State's Attorney Kim Foxx, has defended her office's decision as proportionate to what she described as relatively minor charges, saying that even if Smollett had been convicted he would likely not have faced prison time.

Foxx recused herself from the case after acknowledging she had discussed it with a relative of Smollett. REUTERS

Dr. Tamara Guichard is adaptive in finding the best ways to communicate her knowledge to the best of her ability. Her practice specializes in vulvar and vaginal disorders including warts, STD's, UTI's, Fibroids, and vaginal infections. She provides routine gynecological care and treatment including rejuvenation procedures, colposcopy, uterine polypectomy, and fertility evaluations.

Often we shy away from asking the uncomfortable questions that we all wonder about from time to time. Questions and curiosities that can keep our minds preoccupied and distracted, or even affect our health by avoiding these topics completely. I understand this common fear and worry that many of us share which is why my approach in patient care is always an authentic and individualized experience, treating the patient first as a translator of sorts, helping me investigate the actual symptoms of their concerns.

Without this bond, we are unable to work together to provide long lasting results that treat each issue with patience and understanding. Whether our patients are coming in for a consultation, testing, evaluations, or treatment plans we seek to create an environment that is purely resourceful and educational for our patients to build a network of long and strong healthy lives. We provide a variety of expert knowledge in rejuvenation procedures and preventative solutions for concerns like endometriosis and fibroid that can be very painful and lead to other medical issues if not treated or properly monitored right away. If you suspect any concern or curious about any form of abnormality where it be hormonal, physical, or related to a specific stage in your life we encourage you to reach out and speak to one us directly as well as set up an appointment for thorough evaluation.

My biggest message to the majority of my patients when they come in, is to be in tune with their bodies allowing us both to assess what areas in both personal life and your external life such as social or work can supplement each other and contribute to the overall state of your health.

It's important to stay up to date and review all kinds of testing and treatment plans, not just submit to an instant gratification form of treatment. Many fear the unknown and replace fear with assumptions, self diagnosing and self medicating. If we reduce the fear and simplify the process, we become closer to our bodies and realize that our bodies are not as foreign as we make it out to be.

We truly believe that caring starts with advanced resources and technologies that can give us the opportunity to pin point the issue and replenish a person's health and overall experience as a woman. Especially when it comes to a woman's sexual experience, we all deserve a healthy and safe life when it comes to our intimate expressions.

This is also why we service MonaLisa Touch which is a low energy electric therapy allowing women to have both functional and cosmetic alterations to their vagina. Especially if you feel dryness or are post menopausal, do not hesitate to come in and ask us about our minimally invasive procedures. We welcome you with open arms!

Is carrying a child on your shoulders really considered reckless? I'm sure dads that do this are very careful about how they walk. People are naturally more careful when performing certain things. All I know is, all of the children in my family loved being walked around like this and I have not had a single accident. However, I have almost fallen carrying a child on my hip. Point is, it's not reckless behavior.

'We have never stopped progressing' BRING ME THE HORIZON

The British rock band has released a new album, "Amo," and are ready to go on tour.

Bring Me the Horizon are out promoting their most recent studio album, in which they move away from their aggressive musical style to embrace sounds closer to pop and electronica.

The album achieved a nomination for the 2019 Grammys, and these Brits are ready for their First Love Tour.

Composed by Oliver Sykes, Lee Malia, Matt Kean, Matt Nicholls and Jordan Fisch, the band began its career in 2004 with a strong influence from metalcore and deathcore. Today considered one of the most explosive rock bands in the U.K., Bring Me the Horizon has sold 2 million albums worldwide to date.

Matt Nichols, band drummer, chatted with Metro on how they have transformed through music.

What things have not changed between you guys?
I think we have never stopped progressing. Although everyone has their ideas and beliefs, we are still as creative as the first day. We still have the same vibe between us, and we continue to understand each other perfectly.

> "Instead of producing physical albums, you can have a whole album much cheaper and more compact, easier and faster. So if you can use this tool [the internet] in your favor, that's how you can survive."
> Matt Nichols, drummer

Love is a very powerful weapon. How do you reflect that in your music?
Everything is always about love. It is a vehicle to reach people. We always do it in different measures.

How does a band survive the changes in the music industry today?
We have had to learn to live with it, and take advantage of the tool called the internet, which is another way to actually manage the industry. Instead of producing physical albums, you can have a whole album much cheaper and more compact, easier and faster. So if you can use this tool in your favor, that's how you can (and should) survive.

If you could design your own festival, what sounds would it include?
I really like the idea of a multicultural festival. Apart from rock, genres like hip-hop, electronic music. More than bands, I would like a lot of diversity for all types of audiences.

Try beers from all over the globe at the New York City Craft Beer Festival

Every year, the New York City Craft Beer Festival brings in thousands of enthusiasts from all over to profess their love of all things beer. This year, the festival has found a brand-new home at the Union West events space in the heart of Chelsea.

With over 75 different breweries and 150 different craft beers to choose from, the festival makes its mission every year to highlight some of the best of the best in the Northeast. You know, as a sort of hometown pride sort of thing. The Northeast certainly has a lot to be proud of when it comes to libations as this region has been constantly referenced as a craft beer mecca of sorts over the last few years.

But even so, festival producer Ken Teslar believes that unlike other New York-based craft beer festivals, theirs is unique in that it also tries to branch out of staying purely local in its focus and looks to bring in beers from around the world that will excite even the most casual fans.

"There are a lot of craft beer bars now, which, there wasn't when we first started this," explains Tesler. "Yes, you can go into a craft beer bar and there may be 20 selections or more. But, where can you go where there are 75 different selections, over 150 beers, literally from all over the world? It gives people an opportunity to figure out what they like best and try some stuff that there's a good chance they've never tried before. You might find a new New York beer that you've never tried or something from overseas. We're trying to give people a little bit of everything. I think that's important."

Yankees key season dates

There are a lot of games to watch this season so Metro picked out some of the most important ones for you.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

Now that the pomp and circumstances that come with Opening Day are officially complete, the Yankees, Mets and the rest of Major League Baseball will now prepare for the grind that is the rest of their 162-game season.

When in a tight divisional race — which is something both New York teams are expected to be in this season — April games are just as important as the nail-biters that come in September.

As you prepare to root your team on throughout spring and into the dog days of summer, here are some important days to circle on the calendar for both the Amazin's and Bronx Bombers.

YANKEES

April 8-10 @ Astros

The Yankees' first nine games of the season are as easy a start as one can find. After the opening series against the lowly Orioles, the Yankees host the Detroit Tigers, a team expected to finish near the bottom of the American League Central before traveling to Baltimore for another series with the O's.

It's not until their fourth series of the year that the Yankees run into their first true test of the season by going to Houston to face the Astros. The 2017 World Series champs are poised to make another serious run at a title as one of the few teams considered by many to be more well-rounded than the Yankees. Keep an eye out for the discrepancies in starting pitching as the Astros likely hold a strong advantage. However, a meeting with a vaunted Yankees lineup will provide quite the challenge.

May 30-June 2 vs. Red Sox

The Yankees will have to wait until Game No. 57 to meet the archrival Boston Red Sox in a four-game series in the Bronx.

It was Boston who handily defeated the Yankees in four games during last year's ALDS on its way to a fourth World Series since 2004. It's a rare stretch of futility (in the loosest sense) for the Yankees, who haven't won a World Series since 2009. If they can't pull out a championship this year, it will be the first decade since the 1910s in which the Yankees won't have won a championship.

While it's a May game, this is the perfect opportunity for the Yankees to make a bold statement to the Sox.

July 31: Trade deadline

Major League Baseball's trade deadline offers one final chance for contending teams to find the missing piece to a championship puzzle. For the Yankees, it could offer the chance of picking up some much-needed starting-pitching help.

The team's greatest weakness once again is believed to be the rotation, which could result in them falling short once again to the likes of the Red Sox and Astros. They were linked to the likes of Corey Kluber during the offseason and Miguel Andujar's name was thrown around in trade talks over the winter. We could see a blockbuster if the Yankees are struggling to keep up in the playoff hunt.

Sept. 6-9 @ Red Sox

As things are expected to come down to the wire when it comes to crowning an AL East champion, the early-September meeting between the Yankees and Red Sox in Boston will be the last time these two meet in the regular season. With four massive games up for grabs, a strong showing from either team could take control of the division down the home stretch.

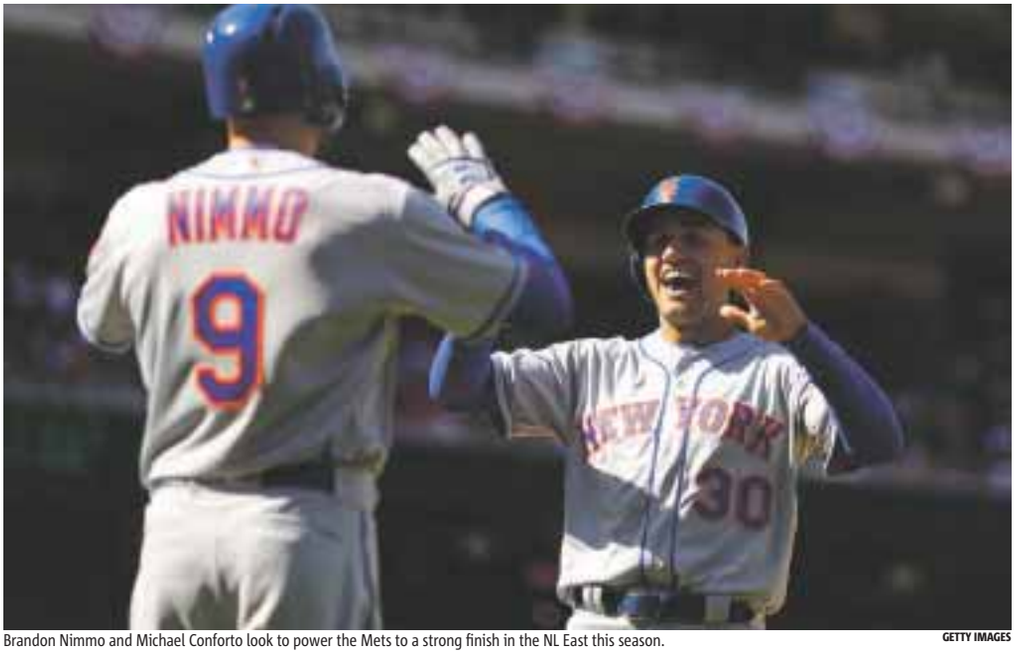
Mets calendar for rest of 2019

METS



Brandon Nimmo and Michael Conforto look to power the Mets to a strong finish in the NL East this season. GETTY IMAGES

April 11-21: Massive early road trip

When it comes to gauging the Mets, usually their success boils down to their health, especially when it comes to their starting pitching.

With everyone as close to 100 percent as possible to start the season, the Mets will be able to state their true intentions of how serious of a contender they'll be in 2019 thanks to a brutal April road trip.

On the 11-day, 10-game rendezvous, the Mets meet last year's NL East winners, the Atlanta Braves, for four games before meeting the Phillies in the City of Brotherly Love for three more. After an aggressive offseason with the acquisitions of Bryce Harper, J.T. Realmuto, and Andrew McCutchen, the Phillies will be major players in the divisional race as well.

The Mets then trek to St. Louis to play a Cardinals team that will have its hands full in a loaded NL Central with the Milwaukee Brewers and Chicago Cubs. But the acquisition of Paul Goldschmidt has St. Louis looking good for 2019.

If the Mets can come out of that stretch with a winning record, expectations will only grow.

June 10-11, July 2-3: Subway Series

The Yankees will first host the Mets in a two-game set a week after facing the Red Sox for the first time. While the Bronx Bombers remain the Kings of New York, the team from Queens spent this offseason building a contender while on a budget in the cutthroat NL East.

In 118 meetings, the Yankees hold a 69-49 advantage over the Mets, but the teams split last season's Subway Series three games apiece — a surprising result considering the Mets were near the bottom of the National League.

July 12-Aug. 7: The schedule eases up

Considering the NL East is shaping up to be a four-team race with the Nationals, Phillies, Braves and Mets, the schedule is not kind to the Mets for a majority of the first half of the season.

From June 7 to July 7, the Mets have 28 consecutive games scheduled against teams that are projected to either make the playoffs or be in the thick of the hunt, which means they have to take advantage of the easier parts of the schedule.

Directly after that difficult month, the Mets have a stretch of 23 games that will come against questionable contenders and some of the lower-division teams in the game as they'll face the Miami Marlins, Minnesota Twins, San Francisco Giants, San Diego Padres, Pittsburgh Pirates (twice) and Chicago White Sox.

If the Mets are for real, they have to dominate against beatable teams, which makes this stretch vital.

Sept. 27-29 vs. Braves

The Mets end their 2019 regular season on a seven-game homestand, the final three coming against the Braves in what could be a make-or-break moment for their playoff hopes.

The top four teams in the NL East are projected to have between 95 and 85 wins, which means if the Mets can keep pace, they'll have a prime opportunity to strike a damning blow to Atlanta's season.
